

Wisdom Dwells With Experience

Sr. Lucy Clynes, DW

August has historically been one of the months that the Daughters of Wisdom celebrate the profession of religious vows. August 2, August 15 and August 22 are dates that remind many among us of God's gracious invitation to follow more deeply the call to profess the three vows of consecrated poverty, chastity, and obedience.

In the Jubilee note from the General Team of the Congregation, Sister Louise Madore, DW suggested that it would be most appropriate to review pictures and journals of our years within the congregation and share these stories with one another. Believing as we do that "wisdom dwells with experience," it is important to let the light of our God dwell within our hearts as well as within our relationships.

I had already begun this "journey" of reviewing pictures and sharing stories as I've gathered photos for the province Jubilee celebration. It has been a gift and has deepened my awareness of how Wisdom has loved me and has continued to shower me with graces and blessings.

The invitation to a review of one's journey through pictures and writing is indeed a very blessed opportunity and one that I invite everyone desiring to know the wisdom and traditions of the Daughters of Wisdom to consider.
